

TISE

THE STINK EYE

April 1, 2019 • Vol. 4

Anoka-Ramsey's Student Newspaper: Satire Edition

“NEWS” CELEBS LIFESTYLE SPORTS

THE SNOW INVASION

& LEPERCHAUNS TOO

THE STINKEYE

Anoka-Ramsey Community College
Coon Rapids Campus
11200 Mississippi Blvd NW
Coon Rapids, MN 55433

Cambridge Campus
300 Spirit River Dr S
Cambridge, MN 55008

THE STINK EYE STAFF

Editor-in-Chief: Zak McPherson

Coon Rapids Staff: Anthony Erickson, Andrew Hayes, Alysha Hovorka, Peighton Koeppen, David Letellier, Jeffrey Leonard, Ivan Lopez-Kne, Jonathan Ness, Ben Tenyes

Advisor: Dr. Melody Hoffmann

OUR MISSION

The Stink Eye is published by students on the Coon Rapids campus at Anoka-Ramsey Community College.

The purpose of the Stink Eye is to provide “news” to the campus, complete with the biases of their students and staff. The newspaper also provides student reporters, photographers, and designers with an opportunity to impose their political biases on others, learn how to make facts and quotes mean whatever they want them to mean, and gain experience at the expense of other peoples’ reputations.

CORRECTIONS AND CLARIFICATIONS

If you find an factual error or typo and wish to bring it forward, dont.

But seriously, hit up The Campus Eye online

Campus news always available at thecampuseye.com

TheCampusEyeARCC

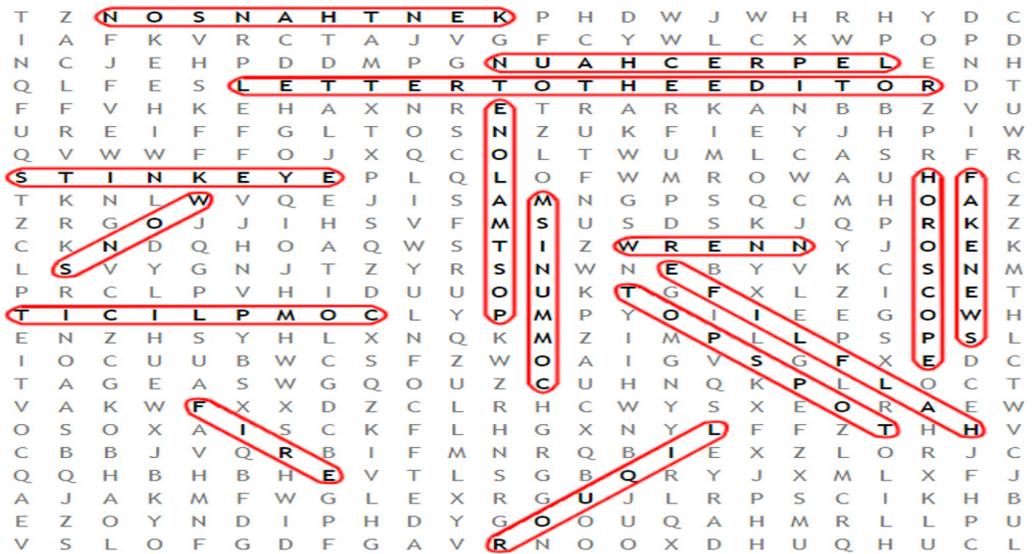

@The_Campus_Eye

@TheCampusEye

Stink Eye Word Search

top spot
horoscope liquor complicit stink eye

wrenn
fire
post malone
snow
communism

kent hanson half life
leprechaun fake news letter to the editor

BONUS WORDS: dyslexia, Jar Jar, ARCC Illuminati, Glitch, paradox, bofy, invisible world

EXTRA BONUS PHRASE: Where did I park this word

Forgotten (but funny) Headlines

Headlines we were too lazy to write a story off of, but we still think you should read them.

Anthony Erickson, Staff Writer

#3 Slim Jim propositions Bigfoot as spokesperson, Macho Man Randy Savage expresses his first “oh no.”

#1 Student sued by game creator after turning in the whereabouts of Carmen San Diego to Anoka-Ramsey campus security.

#4 Kool Aid Man retires, invests pension into wall repair service.

#2 A deer was reported outside Music department. Choir singers gain extra Do in solfège.

#5 Easter Bunny accidentally drinks the blood of Christ, lays red herring instead of eggs.

newswire

LOCAL SNOWMAN NOT READY TO DIE

Jonathan Ness, Staff writer

As winter ends, time is running out for the local snowpeople community. Tears can be heard across the neighborhood as snow melts into the abyss, and snowmen are lost forever. One local snowman, Gary Blizzard, is not ready to die.

"I was born December 1, 2018. I've lived a good life, with my now slushed wife Freeza, who just finished melting at your feet," Blizzard said as icicles formed in his eyes. I couldn't help but feel heartbroken as Blizzard reminisced about his life.

"Freeza and I had our first child, Flake, on January 5. We knew we wanted a little snowlad since the beginning. I remember the first time I stole his little carrot nose," Blizzard said, holding back icicles in his eyes.

He lost his son Flake, at only one week old, which translates to 3 in snowmen years, to a tragic snowplow accident.

"Freeza and I cried for days on end. We didn't know if we wanted to try again until our beautiful little surprise, Chili, came into our lives," Blizzard said.

Chili is currently in an icebox on the way to Antarctica for an expedition.

The snow family did not expect to melt this spring. Blizzard believed that spring wouldn't come for another few years.

"When the temperatures dropped below -60, I started thinking the next Ice Age was upon us. The time where ancient snowmen hunted humans for sport. We have evolved into civilized snowmen now, but I did have a sharpened spear ready in case there was another hunt," Blizzard said.

"Obviously that didn't happen, leaving my wife and I to face our own mortality. I felt like Icarus, flying too close to the sun. So close to immortality."

Blizzard smiled again and offered to buy me a coffee from the local café. Blizzard ordered a large iced coffee, and I ordered a large hot espresso.

"My wife's final words to me were 'I have a sinking feeling I'm going to melt today, Gary.' They were chilling to say the least, but she was ready for the end. I've been wondering why she was smiling as the light from her pebbles faded away," Blizzard said.

"I wonder if she finally believed in Resnowcarnation, or maybe it was the rebirth of the great Frosty that got her. To be quite honest with you I don't think religion is what made her smile."

Blizzard lowered his head and icicles fell from his eyes, stabbing into the wooden floor.

"If I melt today that's ok. I'm ready now," Blizzard said as he grabbed my coffee. I tried to stop him, but it was too late. Blizzard began to melt onto the floor as the scorching cup of espresso burned his body out from under him. Blizzard cried as he faded, his final words still haunt me.

"See you next year friend."

Gary Blizzard informs the Coon Rapids area of his demise.

Student Senate Member Caught Selling Alcohol

Student justified illegal behavior by claiming she was a good samaritan.

David Letellier, Staff Writer

On Feb 25. at 9 a.m. student senate member Demi Gog was caught selling alcohol on campus grounds by the front parking lot. Gog got caught with alcohol and a stolen lemonade stand.

"I was selling [alcohol] because people need to stay warm out in this weather and I needed the money because the Mob is after me," Gog said.

Professor Melody Hoffmann called the police on Gog. One of Gog's customers has been identified, who was later caught in class holding a bottle in a paper bag and was drinking from it in Hoffmann's 10 a.m. class.

Student senate member Demi Gog caught selling alcohol on campus.

Students Puke Over Malone

The hippest star in hip-hop causes mass illness on campus.

Andrew Hayes, The Drip editor

On April 1, Anoka-Ramsey Community College invited Post Malone to perform his new hit single, "Wow" and other songs at the Coon Rapids campus cafeteria. Malone delivered a show ripe with smells and errors.

The campus marketing department hoped this surprise performance would lure in more hip students to help the cafeteria gain a vibrant ambience to outweigh its overpriced food and complement their fancy chairs and tables.

At noon, Post Malone arrived in eskimo attire and Olive Garden breadstick tainted breath, hoping it would cover the stench of cheap beer.

As students began to identify Malone they started to rush toward the pop star. While Malone wasn't expecting any students to notice him in his eskimo attire prior to the cafeteria performance, he was startled and let out a musty pass of garlic gas.

Malone then quickly evaded what appeared to be breathless students on the ground gasping for fresh air. Malone didn't seem to be as fresh as some thought.

As Malone continued to walk to the cafeteria, I followed in great stealth and distance as I didn't want to startle nor smell him.

President Kent Hanson waited outside the cafeteria to greet Malone. Hanson began to reach his hand out but suddenly smelled Malone's stale cologne and decided to go with a hand wave instead.

Hanson told Malone that performing in the cafeteria could increase the popularity of the cafeteria.

"Litty bruh," Malone responded.

At 12:30 p.m. Malone entered the cafeteria. As he opened the doors, many students caught sight of Malone and began cheering.

Malone began his set with his new hit single, "Wow."

While singing the lyrics "It's a moment when I show up, got 'em sayin' 'wow,'" Malone's autotune malfunctioned, exposing his true voice.

As Malone continued to let out distressing vocals, the students begin to cover their ears.

Malone's combination of dreadful vocals and awful breath left students feeling nauseated. Students violently vomited all over the cafeteria and Malone.

Malone's set ended shortly after the mass vomiting. The cafeteria never opened again.

Anoka-Ramsey students puking during Post Malone's set on April 1.

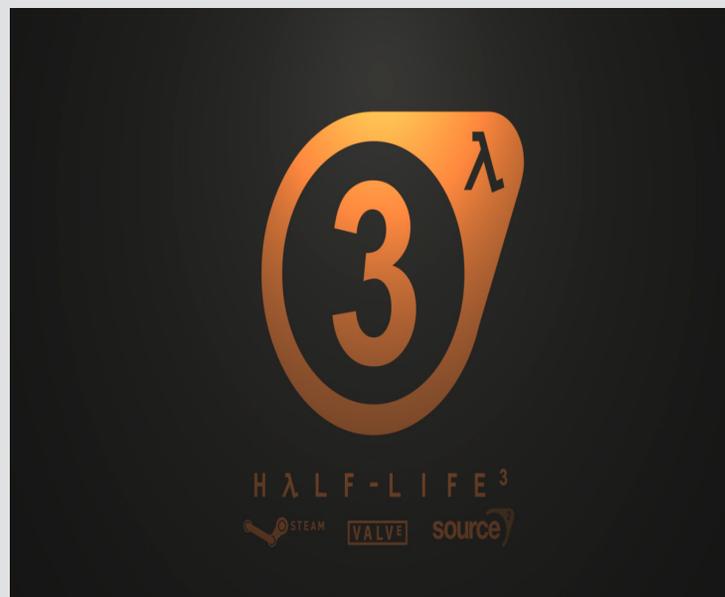

Post Malone performing at the Coon Rapids campus cafeteria on April 1.

Half-Life 3

Our lord and savior has risen

Ben Tenyes, The Itch editor

Release Date: April 1

Publisher: Valve

Developer: Valve

System: PS4, Xbox One, PC, IOS, Wii, Commodore64, etc.

Rating: V (for vaporware)

Price: Can you really put a price on happiness?

The music is equally amazing, with each unforgettable moment heightened by Randy Newman's angelic voice. Overall the only thing about this game that bothers me is that you can only buy it at Toys "R" Us.

Half-Life 3 is the culmination of over a decade of determination, inspiration, perspiration, and possibly time travel. Gordon Freeman is back again to fight the nefarious Combine, but this time he has help from unlikely places.

After waiting so long for this game to come out I assumed it was going to be a letdown. However, after fighting alongside Batman, bringing balance to the force, and going back to the future, I was pleasantly surprised.

Half-Life 3 is an open-world game that never feels cliché, taking the tired tropes of the genre and turning them into magical moments of gaming history.

Story: "Best game ever made, believe me." – Donald Trump

Graphics: It uses spectrums of light only art students can see.

Soundtrack/Score: Randy Newman seems like a weird choice but it works so well!

Replayability: Infinite!

Overall Rating: Perfect

newswire

A Man of the People?

Anoka-Ramsey student enjoys a stress-free college experience .
Jeffrey Leonard, Politics and culture editor

Stress is a problem for most students who attend college, but not for Kyle Jenkins. Jenkins is a student at Anoka-Ramsey who has become somewhat of a celebrity for his enthusiastic and joyous nature. He is an honor student and beloved by all his professors. Jenkins takes part in a handful of clubs and organizations here on campus, most notably Students for Life. He is a pillar of the community here on campus, but for some students Jenkins is an enigma.

"I just don't understand him. How can he maintain such an optimistic mindset as a college student? I want some of what he's taking," student Riley Reed said.

Jenkins has maintained a perfect grade point average throughout his time here at Anoka-Ramsey, but if you ask him it's not about the grades and exams.

"I just love college, the life and experience of waking up every morning and knowing that I have a plethora of assignments and projects to do. Who wouldn't be amazed by how much our professors believe in us, that they offer practically no direction? That's faith right there!" Jenkins said, oozing with excitement.

Jenkins is not loved by all. There are critics and they're vocal. One Campus Eye reporter had no trouble finding over half a dozen students who provided theories as to why Jenkins is in a constant state of happiness. The most critical of Jenkins was a young freshman who had detailed how stressful her course load was this semester.

"I just hate his face. He's smiling over here like we're at Disneyland while I'm over here scrambling to study for an exam in a class that doesn't even have anything to do with the career I'm pursuing. Screw Jenkins," student Savannah Pearson said in a heated interview.

Beneath the surface, rumors abound as to what is responsible for Jenkins' peppy attitude.

"He's on the stuff, ya know happy pills? Practically everyone on campus knows about this. Aren't you supposed to be a newspaper?" student Brock Thompson said to a very agitated Campus Eye reporter.

Jenkins continues to excel in his academic career, with plans to become a motivational speaker after he finishes his degree. The remaining semesters for Jenkins will show if he is indeed a man of the people, or a cautionary tale of how not to become an over-achiever.

Jenkins works tirelessly in his other pursuits of animal rights at local barbecue fundraiser.

Hot Dog, Hot Dog, Hot Diggety Dog!

An accidental fire started today at Anoka-Ramsey by students during experimental class.
McKenna Wright, Staff Writer

On Wednesday March 5, a new Home Economics class started their new unit, Intro to Foods. A class of 15 met at 9 a.m. on the Coon Rapids campus to discuss safety of the school kitchen.

At 9:30 a.m. a loud explosion was heard from the information desk and smoke could be seen leaving the kitchen, says a Nicole Peterson, a nurse major at Anoka-Ramsey.

"I was speaking to a student when I saw in the corner of my eye a huge flame!" a statement from Minnie Mouse, the instructor of the class says, Professor Mouse said that two students confessed right away and told her what happened.

"They were not following directions and were playing with the burners when they weren't supposed to, I'm really disappointed,"

Luckily no one got seriously hurt, although the culprits have a few burns, and they also have been suspended until further notice. The firefighters confirmed that flour was the cause of the explosion.

Meanwhile the school's kitchen will be closed for renovations due to damages. Unfortunately, this could affect future Home Economic classes, because it is still experimental says superintendent Mickey Mouse, who initially funded the project.

Anoka-Ramsey President Mickey Mouse looking out at the Mississippi River during the fire alarm.

Minnie Mouse at the Anoka-Ramsey fall job fair on July 3.

newswire

Saint Patrick's Cache

Leprechaun found on campus was subdued by ceramic pot filled with gold coins.

Andrew Hayes, The Drip editor

On Saint Patrick's Day, Anoka-Ramsey Community College campus security spotted suspicious activity of an angry small man dressed in green. Security stated he was wreaking havoc in the Riverside Room, jumping from table to table.

As security monitored him, they listened closely and heard what appeared to be some sort of gibberish with an Irish accent.

After a minute of the small man's gibberish, they deciphered the language. Security says he was shouting, "Pot o' gold, where you go? I feel no luck, I grow old!"

While security had no idea where this mysterious pot o' gold could be. They couldn't bear to observe his tantrum any longer.

As security approached the small man, he quickly spun around into a defensive position.

The small man shouted, "who you?" As security identified themselves, they asked for his return.

"I Leprechaun, and I've lost me charms," the small man replied.

As security explained that was no reason to take his anger out on campus property, they agreed to help him look.

First they trotted down the music department. Then they skipped along the art department, but still no lucky charms.

"Me find no gold, me go no home," the leprechaun said.

As security watched the little leprechaun have a meltdown, computer science Professor Timothy Wrenn wandered the halls with a freshly made ceramic pot to add to the art department's collection.

As Wrenn walked closer, he stopped in front of the leprechaun and looked down. Wrenn then set down the ceramic pot, reached in his pocket and pulled out a handful of gold coins. The coins were then dropped in the pot and the leprechaun immediately dived in head first.

As security stood very confused, looking into an empty pot, Wrenn stood smirking and said, "No tricks in this cache, just luck."

On Saint Patrick's day, a wild leprechaun is found wreaking havoc in the Riverside Room.

What Mythical Creature are You?

Ben Tenyes, The Itch editor

1. What do you do to relax?

- a. Eat Ben & Jerry while whining about Twilight.
- b. Lure vulnerable sailors to their deaths with my velvety voice
- c. Take long walks through the woods eating beef jerky.
- d. Ruin a reality show by ignoring the ghost hunters.

2. What do you hate the most?

- a. Sunburns.
- b. Earplugs.
- c. Body Waxing.
- d. Being stuck here.

3. If you could kill anyone who would it be?

- a. Kristen Stewart.
- b. The Little Mermaid.
- c. Any barber.
- d. All of the above.

4. What is your favorite color?

- a. Crimson.
- b. Seafoam.
- c. Pine Green
- d. Clear

5. What is your favorite song?

- a. Love Bites by Def Leppard.
- b. Rock the Boat by The Hues Corporation.
- c. Walk Like a Man by The Four Seasons
- d. Bring Me to Life by Evanescence

6. What is your favorite food?

- a. Blood Pudding.
- b. Fish and Chips.
- c. Jack Links Jerky.
- d. No comment.

CALCULATE YOUR SCORE

Mostly As: You are a vampire! You are a moody creature of the night. You have seen every show on Netflix multiple times.

Mostly Bs: You are a siren, the temptress of the sea. Despite your homicidal tendencies you dream of one day finding your true love.

Mostly Cs: You are a Sasquatch. You have big feet and a bigger heart. You are most at home in the forest with a fist full of jerky.

Mostly Ds: You are a ghost. Boredom is your worst enemy. Despite being dead everybody wants to talk to you. It's too bad they are all ghost hunters.

▽
WHAT

YOUR AD HERE! ON SALE THIS WEEK ONLY

▽ $1 ▽
WHEN million/line WHERE

Please. We really need money.

sports

Coach Cheryl Reeve showing her concerns during the Lynx game against the Anoka-Ramsey Golden Rams on March 31. Photo furnished by Lorie Shaull.

Sophomore guard Mikayla Homola dribbles past a Ridgewater defender on Jan. 31 at Anoka-Ramsey Community College.

Rams Hunt Down Lynx

Basketball scrimmage ends with unexpected results

Ivan Lopez-Kne, Staff writer

The Anoka-Ramsey Community College Golden Rams' women's basketball team defeated the Minnesota Lynx 81-79 at the Target Center last night. The Rams were invited to play following some major departures from the Lynx roster.

With the absence of Maya Moore for the 2019 season and Lindsay Whalen retiring from play, the Lynx offered to play the Rams as a warm-up. Lynx head coach Cheryl Reeve said she thought playing one of the finalists in the regional college tourney would not be a major challenge for the team. The resulting loss became a wake-up call to Reeve.

"I didn't think it would be this bad," Reeve said.

Moore was the team's top scorer last season, with an average 18 PPG. The four-time WNBA champion announced on Feb. 5 that she would be sitting out the 2019 season to pursue her interests outside the court, focusing on her family and ministry endeavors.

Whalen retired from active competition while transitioning into a head coaching role for the women's team at the University of Minnesota, where she played in college. She had no previous coaching experience, but her eight championship titles and four gold medals were enough of a letter of intent for the U.

"They say you should never meet your heroes," Nickens said. "I guess it's because they never live up to your expectations."

As Whalen and Moore stepped out, Rams players Charo Nickens and Mikayla Homola became the standout players of the game. The duo had field goal percentages of 66.3 and 42.4 respectively. Nickens and Homola outperformed the former star players of the Lynx at their own game.

"They say you should never meet your heroes," Nickens said.

"I guess it's because they never live up to your expectations."

The two teams agreed to a second game in the fall, but the exact date was not set at this point. The Lynx said they wanted to have the tables turned, when the Rams would have a new team at the beginning of its season.

Maya Moore announcing she will be taking the 2019 season off from the Lynx on Feb. 5.

the back page

Horoscopes

Zak McPherson, Leo

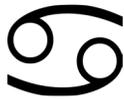

Aries (March 21 - April 19): Start eating breakfast, it's delicious

Taurus (April 20 - May 20): WHATS THAT BEHIND YOU!! Ha. Made you look.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Have you changed your password lately? Probably should do the soon ;)

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Your shoe is untied.

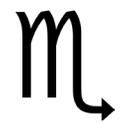

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22): Have you looked in a mirror lately? Yikes!

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): You should get more sleep, the bags are starting to show.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): This will hold no sway over your day whatsoever.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): When was the last time you had a shower?

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): You've got something stuck to the bottom of your shoe.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Today is your day, you are doing fine.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Yes, they are all looking at you.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20): Ask again tomorrow.